GROWTH POLICY

Goal 2.2: Make Livingston an arts and cultural destination paying homage to the rich local

By John Carroll
Enterprise Staff Writer

Long-time Livingston resident Patrice Silvestrone was on a mission Thursday evening riding around town in her shiny, new red scooter.

Her goal: Take in two musical concerts in one night and do some dancing.

First, she scooted over to the Shane Lalani Center for the Arts on Lewis Street to watch the Natalie Padilla Band perform outdoors. It was opening night at the Shane Center for the Summer Outdoor Concert Series.

Then, she maneuvered over to the Stockman Bar to listen to Katherine Taylor and Ride Me Down play some honky-tonk country music. She parked her slick electric scooter on the sidewalk outside the front door.

"I love Thursday nights in Livingston and I love live music and dancing," said Silvestrone, a mother and grandmother who has lived in the area since 1988. "This is so much fun."

Rain threatened to dampen spirits at the Shane Center as it fell intermittently during the outdoor concert. Erika Adams, executive director at the Shane Center, was seen passing out umbrellas as a nearby drizzle drenched

Objective 9.2.1: Actively promote and develop, as well as maintain current, parks, trails, and outdoor recreational areas that promote Livingston's historic, natural, and cultural attributes, as outlined in the City of Livingston's Parks and Trails Master Plan.

The Shane Lalani Center for the Arts has announced the return of community theatre for six outdoor performances of Forever Plaid from July 23 through August 1.

and dream about success. But on the way to their first big gig, the 'Plaids' are broadsided by a school bus and killed instantly. Fortunately, thanks to a conjunction of various vague astro-technical phenomena, the Plaids are able to return to Earth, perform their final concert, and maybe even win a place in heaven. Will they overcome asthma, ulcers, and forgotten lyrics? Will they find the perfect chord?"

Shane Lalani Center for the Arts in Livingston. Show times are Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m. and Sundays at 3 p.m. Tickets are $20 for adults, $15 for seniors and college students, and $10 for youth 17 and under.
