Question/Comment

Good afternoon,

I'm writing to recommend the Civic Center for the Community Wellness Center. It's centrally located and accessible via many means of transportation. It also seems to fit in very well with the Growth Policy and the desire to reduce sprawl and maintain a strong central core. Consider attendance at the Farmer's Market each week, and how many people walk or bike, reducing the need for car travel. Wouldn't that also make this option more environmentally friendly? As well as more readily available and usable by those who either can't drive (seniors or kids) or don't have the means to drive? This segment of our population could benefit tremendously from a Wellness Center, providing physical as well as social benefits.

My second choice would be the Washington School. Much of the needed infrastructure is already in place, which could be a big cost save (even if upgrades are needed). Perhaps the design for the Wellness Center could incorporate some or much of the existing building, resulting in additional cost savings and providing a use for a building already in place. This also seems like a "win" from an environmental perspective.

Thank you for your consideration.

Best regards,

Cynthia Westover
